FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CUE Art Foundation Announces New Executive Director

The Board of Directors of CUE Art Foundation is pleased to announce that Corina Larkin has been appointed as Executive Director.

Ms. Larkin is a visual artist and writer and, before joining CUE's staff, worked as Managing Editor at the Brooklyn Rail. She also worked as a management consultant for many years, focusing on new market entry strategies and organizational development in the telecommunications sector. She holds degrees from Purchase College, Cornell University, the University of Pennsylvania and SAIS/Johns Hopkins University.

President of the Board and CUE founder Thomas Hsu remarked, "As a practicing artist and art critic with a strong background in management, Corina is uniquely qualified to lead CUE into the future. The board is delighted to see her make this transition into an executive position."

Ms. Larkin is delighted to assume this active management role after serving on CUE's board for the past eight years. She looks forward to working with the organization's experienced staff to build on CUE's past successes serving under-recognized and emerging artists.

Ms. Larkin added: "CUE plays an important role in a very challenging art market. It's exciting to help extraordinary but under-recognized artists realize their visions at our gallery. Bringing these artists to the public's attention and deepening the impact of the exhibition experience for each artist is critical work. Moreover, we have an exciting slate of public programming scheduled this year—some of it very practical professional development, and some of it provocative and ground-breaking. There are so many reasons to visit CUE these days."
